4. The German personnel at the ammunition depot were in charge of maintenance and storing the ammunition. It was of German origin and already classified.
5. At the beginning of November 1951, a uniformed Russian woman was assigned to the Soviet guard detail at the depot. She checked the incoming German female workers at the gate. *

* ☐ Comment. The Soviet ammunition depot at Lockrehna, located in the undestroyed section of the former German Air Force ammunition depot, is the collecting point for German captured ammunition. The depot is subordinate directly to the GONG. The incoming and outgoing shipments were not listed in reports on rail movements. The ammunition depots of both Torgau and Wapen still contain stockpiles of German captured ammunition. The receiving stations are indicative of the fact that the shipments were destined for the German Volkspolizei or the police.
